Andrew Gulliford, Ph.D.

Biographical Sketch, Southwest RAC Member

Andrew Gulliford is director of the Center of Southwest Studies and professor of Southwest Studies and History at Fort Lewis College in Durango. Gulliford, a published author who enjoys researching, writing and photographing the rich history of southwestern Colorado, has been serving on the RAC since 2003 in Category 2, archaeology.

A true teacher, Gulliford feels it important to document, interpret, preserve and protect historical and archaeological sites on public lands for the American public. Gulliford adds that everyone "must be good stewards of these irreplaceable cultural sites."

Gulliford dedicates much of his time to public lands, whether he's hiking with his dogs, camping with his family or exploring a past culture. You might also find him atop one of Colorado's 14'rs or rafting, fishing or hunting the great Southwest.
